

Eats at Lancaster

Yes as many of you have heard, the UK is infamous for its awful cuisine charged at disturbingly high prices. Well don't keep your hopes up, because the stories are true. Fortunately I am here to help you dodge some bullets and find some great eats around the Lancaster Campus!

Place you should definitely not go:

Wong's Kitchen

Yes I know you are far from home, so as soon as you realize that there is a Chinese restaurant on campus you might be overjoyed. I will warn you, no matter how much you miss the food back home do not eat here! The only two things you will walk out with from this restaurant is a disappointing taste in your mouth and a light wallet. The Chinese food here is so westernized that no real Chinese person could call it authentic. This restaurant had the privilege to be my first meal at Lancaster, but sadly it was the last one as well.

Greatly Recommended:

Sultan of Lancaster

This is the place you go to be rightly fed. Serving a mix of comfort foods such as burgers and fried chicken and more traditional Indian foods such as butter chicken, and donner kebabs Sultan's has it all. The price is also quite affordable ranging from £3-8 depending on how hungry you are. The store also stays open until 3:00 am, making it the perfect stop before bed after a night out drinking. The staff are extremely friendly, and will often even give out free side dishes!

Pizzeta Reublic

This is a great place if you are craving anything Italian, mainly serving pizzas and pastas. They also have freshly squeezed orange juice and a delicious cheese cake. But I think the best part is their all you can eat pizza Saturday for only £6.99, definitely a great deal!
