5/10 The last day at Mason

Sitting on the quad in front of Fenwick, I reflect on the past great 120 days that have gone by. 120 days are too short to hug you more, but long enough to feel hard to say goodbye.

I still can't believe that I am leaving just like I couldn't believe I was here on January. I was pretty sure that I had left home to the other side of the world then; but now I don't even know I am going home or leaving home...

Thank you guys to give me the most complicated question ever...

Without you guys, I couldn't have had such an amazing life here. I could leave easily, at least, without so much tears lol

But no choice now, memories don't lie.

Every adventures we opened ourselves up and close ourselves down, every promise made and broken, every great jobs and missteps by procrastination. All of them are so precious that deserve to be remembered for life:)

Time can change a lot of things, but it can never steal any single piece of these stories. Happiness will be kept in mind, building a bridge no matter how far away we are. And lead us to do better, to do more, to give more and to love more. To meet again as a better person.

Thanks the God to bring you into my life, to shine when it's dark, to be with us, to love us.

Take care my friends. Wish you a splendid future. Besides, the only thing that I can do is missing you.

Farewell, I will miss you.

Looks forward to seeing u again.

And...

Welcome to lovely Taiwan!;)

William
