課程目標 Course Objectives	This course is an advanced course on comparative insurance law research. Comparative approach is critical in insurance law studies. The course aims to equip students with fundamental understanding and techniques in this field. The course will survey the two main legal families, civil and common law, and their developments in insurance law. Then, we will cover the recently and important developments of main jurisdictions regarding insurance law, including the U.S., U.K., European, China, and other special jurisdictions. Followed by establishment of fundamental theories, some important insurance law issues will be explored and discussed in comparative law perspective. By the end of the semester, students should be able to do comparative insurance law research efficiently and properly.

評量方式 Evaluation	1. Attendance and participation (20%) Students are expected to be prepared before class and participate in discussion. I reserve the right to adjust grades (more than 20%) if there is any extraordinary good/bad performance in class. If you are going to be absent from class, please let me know in advance. 2. Case brief and discussion leader (40%) Every student will be assigned several papers, for which you have to be well prepared, give a short summary, and lead the discussion in class. You are suggested to provide power point presentation to guide the discussion. All papers for this course will be assigned in the first meeting. Format of paper summary and discussion will be further introduced at that time. I will properly adjust the loading of every student according the size of class. 3. Final presentation and paper (40%) Final presentation and paper are important for evaluation. Generally, students are free to select any topics concerning insurance law – not limited to the papers you brief or articles in the text book. However, students are suggested to discuss with me about research topics in the beginning of the semester. In the end of semester, students need to give oral presentation about their topics, and submit research papers after considering the suggestions from me and classmates. Oral presentation and paper follow standard rules. The schedule of oral presentations be decided in the first meeting. The final paper should be submitted within one week after the end of this semester.
